Family Therapy 101: An Introduction to systemic concepts & practice

This popular and practical training programme will be again be offered during 2016. Presented by Graham Allan, Tina McTear and Bruce McNatty.

Family Therapy 101 is a two day training programme that brings a good mix of introductory theory, plus practical take-away skills, to staff and clinicians who are working in community based settings, mental health services, and social service agencies, and who wish to bring a contextual orientation to their clinical work. It's ideal for psychologists, social workers, counsellors, mental health nurses, psychiatrists and psychotherapists and helps them to better understand and respond to client's dilemmas from a systemic orientation.
