

NEW ZEALAND ASSOCIATION OF COUNSELLORS

INTRODUCTION TO SUPERVISION:
A course for beginning supervisors

Friday 13th August – Saturday 14th August; Friday 3rd September 2021

9.00am – 4.30pm

Caccia Birch House -130 Te Awe Awe Street, Palmerston North

The Course

This three-day, interactive course is designed to help counsellors or psychotherapists reflect on their own experiences of supervision and explore other views of what supervision is and what it might be, while considering their readiness to be a supervisor. Introductory material on supervisory concepts, processes and practice-related issues will be considered. The course will also include opportunities for practical skill development in small groups.

Participant

Counsellors who have recently started to supervise others are welcome to attend this course, as are practitioners who are considering supervising others.

Content will include:

Roles and responsibilities – the centrality of relationships in supervision – building effective supervisory relationships, including cultural and bi-cultural considerations and puawānanga kaitiakitanga perspectives – models of supervision – supervisory processes – relationship and boundary issues commonly encountered in supervision – working with multiple role relationships – ethical and professional considerations – evaluating supervision practice – personal and professional readiness to supervise – supervision for the supervisor.

Fee

About the presenters

Margaret Agee, PhD, MA (Hons), DipGuid, DipTchg, MNZAC (Life Member)

Margaret is an experienced counsellor educator who is now supervising, consulting and guest lecturing. Her background as a practitioner includes school guidance counselling, tertiary counselling, and private practice as a counsellor and supervisor. For many years she was also a telephone and face-to-face counsellor with Lifeline. Her particular areas of interest include loss and grief, family counselling, school counselling, and the integral nature of culture and ethics in all that we do. She is passionate about quality counsellor education and professional development, and about the value of skilled supervision that sustains us and enables us to grow through the challenges we face in our diverse spheres of practice. Margaret and her husband Tom share their home with their two cats.

Johann van den Berg, BA (Hons), PGDipEd (Couns), MEd (Couns)(Hons), MNZAC, MACBS

Johann is a counsellor and supervisor in private practice on the North Shore. In addition to experience as a tertiary counsellor and Lifeline counsellor, he also does some teaching and examining at tertiary level in counselling, and supervision at The Grief Centre. Johann migrated from Africa to New Zealand in 2001 and completed post graduate studies at the University of Auckland as a mature student. Johann continues to enjoy the journey alongside students in their growth as practitioners, as well as the challenges and complexities faced by experienced practitioners. He has a keen interest in cultural difference, migration, marginalization, loss and grief in its various forms, and assisting clients in reaching their full potential. Johann is passionate about the arts and lives on the North Shore with his partner and energetic canine companion.
